A SMARTER HOME WITH KOHLER®

Innovative products for an integrated home.

More homeowners, renters, and guests alike are experiencing firsthand the convenience, comfort, and cleanliness a smart, connected home provides. In fact, 75% of homeowners enjoy the technology in their home and are open to more. (2022 Kantar and Kohler proprietary study of 800+ U.S. consumers.)

Surprisingly, network integrators are often left out of the design process. According to NKBA's 2022 Design Trends report, only 30% of kitchen projects and 21% of bath projects included integrated technology. There's opportunity in the gap between what homeowners want and what they're getting for any designer who works together with a residential integrator.

The cyberManor New Home Technology Experience Center is a perfect example of what a truly integrated home can be. The cyberManor New Home Technology Experience Center is a smart home built by Gordon van Zuiden, a network integrator and founder of cyberManor, Inc. The objective of the project was to turn a home into a showroom where partners, clients, and customers can familiarize themselves with the latest technology and integrated solutions available in the home. KOHLER® smart home products were integral in helping to bring this project to life in the kitchen and bathroom spaces.

The kitchen and bathroom are the next frontiers in smart home design and connectivity, and Kohler offers a range of opportunities for network integrators to bring technology to the kitchen and bath space. The KOHLER smart home products used in cyberManor include the DTV+™ digital shower system, Veil® smart toilet, a touchless kitchen faucet, and the Verdera® smart mirror.

> "The top two features of the smart home that our guests most enjoyed were the KOHLER Veil toilet's heated seats and the DTV+ hydrotherapy shower experience."
